CONFIDENCE LOST IN U.S. DOLLAR VALUE

By KEN SMITH

Canadian Press Business Editor What's behind the great gold rush? In over-simplified terms, it means that a lot of people have lost confidence in the value of paper money. Instead of having dollars or pounds in their wallets, they want gold in their basements or bank vaults. These people, the specula tors who are buying all the gold they can afford, are betting that gold soon will be worth more than paper money-in other words, that paper money will be country holding dollars at the rate of one ounce of gold for country was especially anxious to amass gold-U.S. dollars were accepted as just as good. Why, then, the sudden loss of confidence in the value of the U.S. dollar and the demand for gold, the basic measure of exchange since history began? There are several reasons, including the loss in value of the British pound and its psychological effects which made people wonder if other currencies were sound.

Basically, however, it re-lates to the fact that for several years now the U.S. has been spending more money in other countries than it has been receiving from them-an adverse balance of payments. Lately this probem has grown to vast proportions because of the huge drains in the U.S. financing the Vietnam war.

No country can keep on spending more than it gets indefinitely, since sooner or later its money will not be as it used to be.

Speculators now are betting the U.S. is in, or getting close to, this position.

SWITCH MONEY As a result, they are switching their paper money to gold. If the U.S. does have to devalue its currency, all other currencies now measured in terms of the U.S. dollar, including Canada's, would be Another problem is that the U.S. does not have unlimited gold holdings to give other countries in exchange for its dollars. It now has less than $12,000,000,000 worth of gold, but $10,400,000,000 of this still is tied to backing its domestic dollars. President Johnson is seeking to have this backing and free those holdings to meet international demand. This would not affect the

Up for Re-Assessment

MOST OF THE PUNDITS WERE half-wrong in their forecasts of the New Hampshire presidential primaries: Mr. Nixon did sweep the Republican Party vote as had been expected, but Senator McCarthy picked up 42 per cent of the Democratic Party vote - as definitely had not been expected. The heavy vote for the senator, in the face of a strong write-in campaign on behalf of President Johnson, may have demonstrated that the split in his party goes down to the roots.

One mistake which should not be made in assessing the New Hampshire results is to assume that Senator McCarthy's showing indicates a strong sentiment against the Vietnam war among Americans generally. Of the approximately 160,-000 votes cast (106,000 Republican and 54,000 Democrat) the senator's share was just under 15 per cent. The President doesn't fare much better in the estimation of New Hampshire voters, with just over 16 per cent of the vote. Mr. Nixon garnered 50 per cent of the total vote and various other conservative Democrats and Republicans the remainder, which makes it rather evident that the over-all result was hardly a demand for peace in Viet-tor McCarthy could take 42 per cent of the Democratic votes in a state the Republican nomination, where even the Democrats are by long tradition very conservative is going to result in some reappraisals of President Johnson's chances of winning the presidential race next November. More than this, Senator Kennedy's second thoughts about challenging the President for the Democratic nomination (and it still must be assumed that Senator McCarthy hasn't the support to win at the Chicago convention in August) suggest that Mr. Johnson's support in the party is now less than anyone had thought. A cool and pragmatic politician, Mr. Kennedy will only challenge the President if he is reasonably sure of win-

There are 14 more primary elections to be held between now and June 11, with Wisconsin next on April 2. In most cases the results of these elections have relatively little significance on the outcome of the party nominating conventions in the sense of firmly binding delegates to one candidate or another. Their significance is chiefly psychological and there is no doubt that President Johnson was badly wounded by Senator McCarthy's surprisingly good showing in New Hampshire. On the other hand, Mr. Nixon's success could be the turning point in de-Nevertheless, the fact that Sena- ciding Governor Rockefeller against officially becoming a candidate for

THE NEWS COLUMNS THESE days carry details of student riots in the streets of Polish cities, and the fact that such items are emanating from behind the oncesolid Iron Curtain is itself news of great significance. The reader must be struck by the similarity between these incidents in Poland and those reported from Western countriesand the implication is that the same forces of youthful dissatisfaction and rebellion are operating in Communist youth as among their counterparts in the West.

While mob violence in the streets cannot be condoned as the best way to demonstrate political or social convictions - the bully-boy gangs of Hitler and Mussolini gave all too clear proof of the dangers of this type of activity-it can certainly be interpreted as indicating the existence of a strong tide of individual and group sentiment. ## Instead Of Talking About It

IN A COMPLEX NORTH AMERI-can society which appears everready to create a committee to study any problem which pops into public notice, the story of the Budd Schulbergs and their Watts Writers' Workshop strikes a novel note.

The Schulbergs are not working alone in this reportedly successful effort to give encouragement to the unfortunates of the Los Angeles ghetto district. They have help and they are happy to receive more, both in the form of finances and competent workers.

But the Schulbergs started the thing-and not by calling a committee. They saw a job to do and husband and wife dug in to do it. In guished American writer persisted in his invitation to the predominantly poor Negro element in Watts to enrol for courses in writing he was prepared to give. Mrs. Schulberg, an actress in her own right, typed manuscripts. Together they have provided training and incentive for people who previously knew only hopelessness. And their example has attracted other gifted people to lead workshop drama classes.

There may be much to be said for the committee approach to problems. In a large number of cases, however, no committee discussion can substitute for direct actionthe kind of action in which a person takes off his coat and works at a spite of lack of interest the distin- project instead of talking about it.

What Now, Thoughts of Mao?

year's Red Guard turmoil in China is suggested in trade figures recently released by the Sino-British Trade Council in London.

Last year, for the first time since the Communists assumed control of the Republic, Britain had a surplus. Exports to China rose by $14.4 million to a record $91.4 million, and British imports from the country declined $9.6 million to $71.2 million, producing the surplus of $20.2 million.

As the analysts see it, the dis-

Who Should Handle Educational TV?

TN a well-reasoned brief to the stand-I ing committee on broadcasting, Dr. W. C. Lorimer has argued on behalf of Manitoba that the CBC should be the federal agency responsible for educational television. This is not the view which governed Ottawa's approach to the problem. But the positive arguments advanced by the Manitoba deputy minister of education are the more persuasive because the dangers of the alternative course have been underlined by other evidence submitted to the committee and by events outside it.

The Manitoba department was the first provincial body to venture into this field. It did so, of course, in co-operation with the CBC which provided physical facilities, technicians and administrative personnel for the production of programs. Manitoba has been responsible for program content. Through co-operation with other departments of education, it has been possible to bring programs of higher quality to a wider audience while overcoming some of the provincial curricular barriers

As an indication of the progress achieved, Dr. Lorimer noted that the year-round schedule now involves about 100 productions of half-hour telecasts in the period October to May. Manitoba looks forward to a progressive expansion of the program with the ultimate hot line (Daily Times March 5) - Mr. cover the school day. For this a network devoted exclusively to ETV would be required. However, Manitoba is opposed on grounds of cost and efficiency to the Strachan that the NDP, get far more creation of the new agency. As the CBC knowledge and experience," Dr. Lorimer Regina from the CCF Socialists. The argues instead that there be created a standard reply by the CCF was that it semi-independent educational branch, wouldn't be in the interest of the per with is

Ontario Action

The Manitoba experience has been duplicated in other provinces. Ontario, for example, budgetted $1,114,000 for educational TV last year and distributed about 450 programs. While some provinces have been eager to move more rapidly, it is to be observed that the necessary basis for a further advance was created without any confrontation between Ottawa and the provinces over the question of jurisidiction. This developed only with the move to create by federal legislation a separate agency for ETV. Unfortunately but not surprisingly, what was originally a rather narrow conflict has assumed dangerous dimensions.

Any act to create a special agency for educational television must begin by delimiting the field. What is proper for the new authority and what should be left to the CBC or private broadcasters? But education is not easily defined. In the draft bill submitted to the committee as a basis for study, Miss LaMarsh offers not a definition but a description of educational programs. For example, they must be designed to provide continuity of program content aimed at the systematic acquisition or improvement of knowledge." Further, this must be capable of supervision through registration or enrolment, granting of credits, examination and so on,

Protest Limitation

Numerous witnesses before the committee have objected to this limitation of the subject matter. They have argued that ETV should be given a definition wide enough to include "enrichment" programs, "general cultural and informational programming as well as instructional material." Dr. Lorimer himself appeared to share this view and Mr. Jamieson, a former president of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters expressed doubt that it would be possible to find a generally acceptable definition.

It is natural that educators should be reluctant to endorse an artificially of Mao by youngsters last year. . limited concept of education.

concern there is bound to be in the province which has shown the greatest sensitivity in the matter - Quebec.

Mr. Daniel Johnson's announcement that Quebec is moving into the broadcasting field was not a bolt from the blue. The fact is that his predecessor, Mr. Maurice Duplessis, as far back as 1945, secured the passage of legislation establishing a "Quebec radio bureau." This was never more than a gesture because the former Quebec premier knew better than to challenge a federal jurisdiction upheld by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. (In Quebec nationalist mythology, the Privy Council is held up as an example of an impartial tribunal, in alleged contrast to the Supreme Court of Canada.)

The bureau did nothing except to express symbolically Quebec's protest. In these circumstances national television was free to develop. The CBC, without attempting to draw an artificial distinction between education and culture, co-operated with interested provincial bodies in the development of educational television programs.

But now what is happening? By her attempt to remove the CBC from the field and to set up a special federal best course for Parliament

But the wider the definition, the more agency for the development and operation of an ETV system, Miss LaMarsh has given the Quebec government an excuse for intervention. There is not the caution in Quebec City that there was during the Duplessis dictatorship. Mr. Johnson has protested vehemently, as was to be expected, but he has also moved to block the federal "invasion." The significant point, however, is that the Johnson government is not fretting about definitions. According to one spokesman, quoted by The Globe and Mail, the promised legislation will not merely bar the operations of the federal agency; it will also facilitate Quebec's entry into the general broadcasting field. Mr. Guy Guerin, a Montreal judge named to head "Radio Quebec," says that "the purpose is clear: to promote education and culture.'

This sounds distinctly like a threat to the CBC, which has been given a new mandate in the cultural field. It might have been averted if the corporation had been permitted to continue along the lines suggested by Dr. Lorimer, For other reasons, including the very important consideration that a duplication of agencies is bound to result in increased costs, that still appears the

At a meeting of the directors of this Association your editorials of March 8, entitled 'A Gag on Protests," and "A Good Decision" were drawn to their attention. The directors are in entire agreement with the analyses you made.

It appears evident that the proposed amendment to the Pollution Control Act 'really represent. restricting public participation in protests against any permit which may be granted by the Pollution Control Board is very retrograde, to say the least, and very definitely we agree with you that this legislation should not be enacted.

SCORE one point for each side in Mon-day's clash on Vietnam policy between the secretary of state, Dean Rusk, and his critics on the senate foreign relations committee. To Mr.

Rusk's credit, he stated the admini-stration's policy goals cooly and brilliantly under great strain. It was only under heavy pressure from Congress that he agreed to appear at all before committee in open session. He has

But what he failed to do - in the process giving the other side an important point by default - was to display any sensitivity to the dissension which is rocking the country and is reflected in the attitudes of a majority of foreign relations committee members.

Specifically, he failed to assure the committee that Congress would be consulted before further major decisions were made on pursuit of the Vietnam

Decisions in Offing

Such decisions are in the offing. A fullscale re-examination of the war's conduct is under way within the administration, set off by the setbacks suffered in the recent Tet offensive and by the U.S. commander's subsequent request for huge U.S. reinforcements, The commander, Gen. William Westmoreland, is reported to have asked for as many as 206,000 new troops - an increase of 40 per cent.

A startling outburst on the floor of the Senate last Thursday served notice of the deep political concern over impending events. Senator after Senator rose with impassioned demands that Congress, for a change, be involved in discussions before rather than after the next escalation decision is made.

Frustration in the Senate reflects a growing national malaise. As Sen. Fulbright observed in his tough-spoken opening declaration at Monday's committee hearing, the growing war is killing optimism and creating alienation and a feeling of betrayed ideals among much of the nation's youth. Home

The normally mild Sen. Mike Mansfield of Montana, the Democratic party leader in the senate, spoke with sharp bitterness of the great unrest and uneasiness sweeping the country.

Public Fears Ignored

Mr. Rusk did little to acknowledge the very real public fears which the senators represented. But it is to be hoped that the administration got the message: If President Johnson presents the Congress with one more fait accompli in the form of a major escalation of the Vietnam war, there is no telling how much the already poisoned atmosphere in this country will be worsened. The come for national decisions to replace those of one man.

But if Mr. Rusk provided little reassurance on this point, he did provide an excellent summary of the facts which the administration believes should most strongly influence whatever decisions are made.

He was stronger than ever before in declaring that the United States was acting in the administration's concept of the country's national interest, and not out of any altruism. "Our treaties." he said, referring chiefly to the South East Asia treaty, "are not philanthropic they are necessary to the defence of the United States."

Although the main U.S. effort is in South Vietnam, he said, the war there is only one aspect of what is really a South East Asian problem, which in turn is an aspect of the basic problem of organizing peace in the world.

Not Just Patriotic

And if North Vietnam's Ho Chi Minh is really just acting as a patriotic Vietnamese nationalist, Mr. Rusk asked. why are there 40,000 North Vietnamese troops in Laos? Why are North Vietnamese-trained guerrillas fighting against Thalland? And why are still other Communist-led guerrillas infiltrating Cambodia and Burma?

To Mr. Rusk, what is happening in South East Asia is the result of an "appetite" on the part of Hanoi's leaders, one which cannot be allowed to be satisfied. That appetite in turn is part of the over-all Communist pursuit of world-wide revolution. But it must be resisted. The Truman and Eisenhower administrations devised their world-wide defence treaties with that in mind, Mr. Rusk said. "I seriously worry what would happen to the peace of the world of the fidelity of our treaties is questioned." This is tough talk, and suggests tough Fifteen immi- decisions forthcoming from the adminigrants will be hired stration. Few senators would disagree with the intended nobility of overall U.S. policy. The serious debate is whether the Vietnam war, as it is being conducted, serves or hinders achievements of the higher goals,

LONDON - One reason for the resumption of student demonstrations and police retaliation in Warsaw must be the extraordinarily clumtreatment of the disturbances by the Polish

The first report in a Warsaw paper last weekend attributed the trouble to "banana youth", the children of well-to-do parents — and this week the official Communist party paper, Trybuna Ludu, made matters worse with a commentary which provoked the young people into burning the paper in the streets.

Trybuna Ludu described the demonstrations as "brawls' instigated by a group of political bankrupts of various sorts who had tried to lure into their net young people who were "unfortunately disby whispers and unfounded rumors."

The scale of student support demonstrations suggests that either these "political bankrupts" have a powerful influence on the universities, or that the student body is uncommonly gullible.

C e rtainly anti-Communist elements in Warsaw would make every effort to exploit the student movement for their own ends. But this proves nothing.

Swedish South Africa Defies UN Student Unions

By DOROTHY RICH

In Sweden during their 1966 teachers' strike high school students took over the schools their teachers and principals were out on strike.

Everything wasn't perfect, but it did prove that students who are trusted and prepared for leadership can take over where necessary.

The Swedish Student Union with 320,000 members, ages 13 to 20, has been in existence since 1952.

The student councils represent the student body with faculty and

During weekends, these leaders take intensive courses in such subjects as "school democracy.'

They take an active part in planning courses, handling discipline and running the school social program. They have lobbied for more objective teaching, greater accent on international studies, and more in dependent through use of modern teaching aids.

These students have had to fight hard to put over the idea of student influence. It was their performance during the their seriousness.

There is a great need for to come up with ways to help youngsters take on leadership roles, in ways that will enable them to grow into responsible adults. Perhaps a student union, such Sweden's, would be useful.

Teachers have to involve students more actively in daily classroom life, from helping set class policies, to learning how to evaluate their own efforts.

This doesn't mean that teachers stop teaching; it means instead a new role for teachers - not as domineer ing managers, but as aides, resource people. This is a much harder, much more subtle kind of teaching.

At home, children can be encouraged to many and different leadership roles, depending on their age and ability — from washing their ability - from washing their own socks to planning the family dinner.

Children need to feel needed. The parent who does everything for his child is really doing him a bad turn. household then stops when the mother is ill or out even though the children could well take over if given preparation and the chance: it like the schoolroom when the teacher leaves.

There's no reason why either one has to collapse.

South African government has told the United Nations that South Africa will continue to combat terrorist activities by appropriate measures, "at least until the current political and social turmoil in Africa has abated and had made way for greater stability". This statement, contained in a 54-page letter by South African Minister of Foreign Affairs Dr. Hilgard Muller to the UN Secretary-General U Thant rejects the strong pressure which the UN has exerting on Prime Minister Vorster's government to with draw the recent terrorist trial

CAPETOWN - The

Both the British and American delegates at the UN criticized the trial, but the British delegate, Caradon, warned the against exceeding its UN capacities in trying to free the terrorists. He said: "We would be guilty of raising hopes we cannot fulfil."

Only Way

India's Ambassador, Gopalaswami Parthasarathi, however, called on the Security Council to invoke sanctions against South Africa as the only way to obtain the release of the imprisoned South-West Africans, and the Brazilian Ambassador, Geraldo de Varhalho Silos, supported the call "bold and effective action to free the men.

The terrorist trial was brought to an end with the conviction of 33 Africans. Nineteen were sentenced life imprisonment nine to 20 years' imprisonment, and two to five year's imprisonment, terrorism. Three others, who pleaded guilty to alternative charges under the Supression of Communism Act, were given suspended five-year sentences.

Another trial is being prepared now, with at least Africans as the accused. If more terrorists are captured before this trial begins, they will be added to the list.

The reason why the UN has shown such interest in the Pretoria terrorist trial is that the accused Africans were all captured in South-West Africa, the adjoining territory which South Africa acquired under mandate from the old League of Nations. As a German colony South-West Africa surrendered to South African forces in 1915 during the First World War.

Found Guilty

The Africans were found guilty of entering South-West Africa with arms with the intention of creating a 'violent revolution.

They presented themselves as "freedom fighters," seek-ing to liberate their country from the white rulers in Pretoria, whose jurisdiction over South-West Africa they reject.

The trial, therefore, involved the whole question of By STANLEY UYS

Resent Clamor

They resent too, the clamor which occurred at the United Nations when it was thought that the Pretoria court might sentence the accused men to death. In fact, the judge announced in advance that would not impose death sentence, but he added that in future the courts would not necessarily hesitate to impose the death penalty. Denying that he had been dissuaded from passing the death sentence by international pressure, the judge said: "Persons who let themselves be trained as terrorists with the purpose of over-throwing the authority of the state, and then proceed to try to achieve that aim, are guilty of treason for which the death penalty can be imposed." This statement must be in conjunction with the state-ment by Foreign Minister Muller, that "appropriate measures" will continue to be taken against terrorists, and with the statement by South Africa's chief UN representative that "where terrorism exists, it is a cancer which no government can tolerate.

The South African Government will ignore, too, the General Assembly resolution of October 27 last year purporting to "revoke" South Africa's mandate over South-West Africa. It regards this resolution as invalid

In his letter to U Thant, Dr. Muller stated: "Being responsible for the welfare of all the in habitants of South-West Africa, the government of the Republic of South Africa cannot allow a group of trained terrorists to create a Viet Cong-like reign of

Small Groups

The terorist campaign in South-West Africa started in earnest last year when small groups of Africans, trained at nps in certain independent African states (and, it alleged, also in Communist countries) crossed over the northern border from Zambia, also possibly from

On crossing into South-West African territory, they entered the African reserve of Ovamboland, where 240,000 of the 450,000 non-whites in South-West Africa live. This is the biggest non-white reserve the territory and it is being developed as a "shop-window" for the South African government's policy of apartheid, or 'separate development.'

After a number of terrorists had been captured, the South African government intro-duced the Terrorism Act, applying its provisions to South-West Africa as well. This Act has been vigorously attacked at UN for its severe retrospective provisions. Included in the definition of terrorism, for example, is any action which might "embar the affairs of state.

Dr. Muller has defended the Terrorism Act, and explaining the retroactive provisions said some terrorists had left South-West Africa from 1962 onwards to receive training. Only recently had some of them started to return.

Uninterrupted

"Their involvement has been uninterrupted. If terrorists began an offensive in 1967 which only came into full effect in 1967, why should the ter-offensive not also be valid from the first date?

Since the passing of the Ferrorism Act last year, there have been further terrorist incursions, not only into South-West Africa, but also through Rhodesia and Botawana — the latter being aimed directly at South Africa. Terrorist trials, involving Africans captured both in the disputed territory of South-West Africa and elsewhere, therefore, likely to be held more quently in South Africa.

delegates pledged to vote for the candidate The Quiet-Looking Ponds Humming Under the Surface

By DR. CLIFFORD CARL Director, Provincial Museum

At this time of year a pond shelters an active community of living creatures. All winter long its dark waters have appeared lifeless but even during their period of apparent rest the thread of life has remained unbroken; eggs, spores and other resting forms have remained dormant awaiting the opportime to recommence their life cycle. Some species in fact remain active during this time when most organisms are quiescent. Fairy shrimps, for example, hatch some time after the fall rains have filled the hollow, the hardcovered eggs having survived the drought of the late summer months. The almost transparent young pass unnoticed for the first few months of life, their world being further isolated occasionally by a covering of ice. By early spring they are almost full grown revealing themselves as inch-long creatures of grace and beauty and earning the name "fairy" because of their fragile appearance.

A close look shows many pairs of paddle like legs which move in waves to push the crustacean through the water and the bulging eyes which mark the front end. Most remarkable is the fact that the creature swims upside down, a habit which apparently enables it to more easily draw in food material from the surface of the water beneath which it often swims. In time eggs will develop in a sac attached near the tail of the females and these will be released when the bearer dies at the end of its cycle.

Also as "hold-overs" from the previous season are several kinds of insect larvae, particularly in ponds which contain water all year round. In such habitats nymphs of dragonflies and "worms" of caddis-flies live through the winter showing little activity during the colder periods but ready to resume growth and development as soon as the water warms in the spring. The former are "leggy" creatures with a heavy-set body and a grotesque expression on the "face" — the result of a peculiar development of the lower jaw into a hinged structure which can be shot out to capture prey. In the resting stage it folds under the chin, covering part of the head

The caddis-fly larvae are easily overlooked unless they are moving because each one is encased in a tube made of debris, bits of wood, fragments of fir needles, grains of sand or any similar material that happens to be available all cemented together to form a hollow cylinder in which the insect lives. When not being pulled around by its inmate these small structures appear to be just another piece of trash on the bottom of the pond.

When these two very different kinds of insects mature later on in the season they transform to the adult stage and each goes its separate way. The process differs somewhat in each case. The dragonfly nymph struggles through the trash accumulated at the pond's edge and hauls itself clear of the water or else laboriously climbs the stalk of an emergent water plant to git in the stalk of an emergent water plant to sit in the sun and dry off. Soon a split occurs along the mid-line of the back of the old skin and through this opening the adult escapes—first the tail followed by the wings and finally the front-end. The wings rapidly expand to full size; as soon as they are useable the insect takes off.

The emergence of the caddis-fly is no less dramatic. The larva transforms into the adult while sealed within its tube and resting at the bottom of the pond. It breaks open the temporary plug which closes the entrance, quickly rises to the surface and takes wing as moth-like creature, the "sedge fly" of the

The F. H. Vanier Centre of Canada Limited was formed to build happy marriages, thereby reducing the number of separations and divorces in Canada. It is the Centre you have heard discussed on national radio and network television in the United States and Canada.

The Centre's goal is achieved by applying a pro-fessional, scientific method, administered by IBM computers, to record and analyze detailed characteristics that suggest the compatibility of men and women registered with the Centre. Compatible registrants are then introduced.

The Vanier Centre is definitely not a typical "matri-monial agency." Those registered with the Vanier Centre are serious-minded, sincere men and women. Insincere applicants are rejected.

If you are a single man or woman, or a divorced or separated person, between the age of 18 and 75, you are invited to enquire if you qualify to register with the Centre. All correspondence is sent in unmarked envelopes and is completely confidential.

GRAIN

WINNIPEG (CP) - Early advances in flax and rye futures were sharply reduced today in erratic trade on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange. The growing world distrust for paper currency contributed to early advances in flax prices of more than three cents but quotations were reduced near the close.

Considerable profit-taking came in on the flax advances and similar advances also were reduced in rapeseed, which had shown a firmer appearance. Rye also saw early advances

At Toronto the gold index rose 5.73 points, after one hour of trading, then slipped back. Senior stocks took a mixed pattern but some of the group's smaller issues continued to gain.

Golds at New York weakened as analysts anticipated drastic measures by U.S. monetary authorities to halt the drain on U.S. gold and the dollar. The feeling spread that the U.S. Federal Reserve Board might increase the discount rate as a step towards strengthening the dollar in foreign exchange.

Curb Gold Spree City Man Urges

Business Editor

Investment men are quick to fault the trend to buying gold as a hedge, against inflation, but few do any-thing about it from privately urging restraint

So, taking matters into o w n hands Wed-nesday, Vichands investtoria ment sales man C. Whitworth Stanbury wired a pertinent, personal message to Prime Minister Finance Minister Pearson, Sharp and Opposition Leader Stanfield.

It called for firm government steps to control the wild buying of gold that would work for the national interest rather than narrow objectives

He said:

"It would appear to me that a national emergency has arisen regarding gold; that the government should introduce legislation forthwith barring export of this commodity; that the Canadian public be given six months to convert their gold to cash at the present rate; that after period anyone hoarding gold or tendering it for sale be subject to a severe Initial sympathies expressed by Mr. Stanbury's colleagues ran like, "Why didn't someone think of this before?'

In effect, the idea would be to subject Canadians to the same prohibition applied to ownership of gold by U.S. citizens. Of course, Parliament would have to create its own legislation.

Mr. Stanbury said his action-taken quite independently of his employer-might lose him some clients. But he was prepared to run that risk in the national interest, knowing that other people in the banking and investment business support him.

Those who hope to profit by the gold market are helping to erode the monetary system, a pointedly selfish and-for want of a better word—un-patriotic attitude.

"Everyone was talking about this situation, but nobody was doing anything about it," Mr. Stanbury said. Maybe a few more people will now speak up.

In spite of the reluctance to arrange gold deals, some sizeable purchases have been made through investment dealers and banks.

Although many of the recent local buys have been in the $10,000 range, one gold deal made at about the time of the last market surge some three months ago cost $200,000.

They range down from there to just a few dollars, down from including many by persons doing it for the first-time novelty of owning a piece of Concurrent with the gold boom there is a mild but developing interest in silver bullion on the London market, which only adds to what some people feel is an illogical situation.

These are the people think the price of gold should be freed to find its own level—undoubtedly higher than the current $35 (U.S.) per ounce-and the price of silver should go down.

One man who deals in precious metals thinks gold should be $50, silver 50 cents. That would be a decline of more than $1.70 for silver, one of the metals most in demand by industry today,

* * * As the bullion market thrives, so do the gold stocks, and as one of the lesser of these, Silver Standard Mines Ltd. reacted suddenly Wednesday.

The former gold-lead-silverzinc producer was selling at 67-68 cents Tuesday, President R. W. Wilson wrote to shareholders stating his belief the price of gold will go higher. Silver Standard shares rose 10 cents by the close at Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Mr. Wilson pointed out that the company over the past 20 years had acquired seven "promising" gold properties in B.C. and the Yukon. When the price of gold rises, Silver Standard is prepared to launch an immediate exploration and development program on at least three of these properties, he said.

He outlined them as the Blue Ice claims in the Cariboo district north of Kamloops, with a large deposit of medium grade ore; The Table Mountain group east of Cassiar; the Smith group between Kemano and Terrace; Tide Lake gold and silver property north of Stewart; Black Dome property west of Clinton; Pellaire gold-silver property northwest of Bralorne, Mount Nansen, Yukon, where

The message from the south-eastern B.C. city was delivered in identical telegrams to Horace Simpson, chairman of the Interior Forest Labor Relations Association negotiating committee, and Jack Moore, regional president of the International Woodworkers of America.

E. T. Clegg, Grand Forks administrator, said the telegrams appealed for renewed negotiations to settle the strike by 4,000 union members in the southern interior.

Pontiac Firebird versus All Sports Cars

Pontiac's magnificent five Firebirds are our answer to a winding road. And to any sports car you'd care to put against them. We invite you to find a better answer. There are five Firebirds . . one for every kind of driving. Firebird gives you standard engines ranging from the most sophisticated OHC 6 in the business, with 175 hp, right up to a 330 hp V8.

And to keep it all in place, a firmed up, but obliging suspension. And you can even add disc brakes. Inside are buckets and simulated burl elm on the dash. It looks so real, only a termite can tell for sure. And right now, you can get a great deal on a Firebird. Come in and drive one today. You can't do better.

The Gordon Head Co-Operative Play Group housed in the Thomas More Centre is a sussessful example of an unusual concept in pre-school

Part of the Vancouver Is-land Co-Operative Pre-School Association, a branch of the mother group started in Van-couver in 1945, it exemplifies the idea of a working rela tionship between mother, child

As it's name indicates, it is set up and controlled by parents in the area. At Gordon Head, the mothers rented the church, bought the toys, painted the benches, purchased the piano and established and pay for the teacher's salary.

Parents meet once a month with the teacher to determine fees, new projects and estabworking arrangements.

But most important of all, each mother takes an active school program.

At Gordon Head, there is one teacher who looks after 18 youngsters in the morning and 22 in the afternoon.

She is helped each day by one of the mothers. Rotating daily, each mother will probably spend a complete day at the pre-school play group once a month.

CAN OBSERVE CHILD

This participation is an essential part of the aim of the Association. Not only does it leave the teacher more time to spend with individual children and more time to create a stimulating and enriching program, but it gives the mother a chance to observe her child in a classroom situation.

It may also influence her handling of the child at home. By her observation of youngsters of the same age, she learns to accept children as they are, without imposing adult standards on their work.

AT NEW SPEED "The children are encouraged to move at their own speed," says Gordon Head teacher Mrs. Dianne Cowden. "They are not forced into learning such things as reading—if lots of communication is allowed, they're well on their way." There is a fixed but flexible program for the pre-schoolers. But they are encouraged to be original, create their own projects and choose their own materials.

"They come up with all sorts of exciting combina-tions," says Mrs. Cowden, "and their creations are a lot more exciting than 30 identical drawings of squirrels."

"It's a wonderful schoolthe children are free to do what they want," says Mrs. Sue Jain, wife of a Uvic chemistry professor, whose four-year-old daughter attends

IT'S MY VIEW . . .

By Ernie Fedoruk

George Fleharty is a youngish 43 and a third generation

Now a successful sports promoter, the San Francisco native spent the past weekend in our town. It was a "mostly" pleasure" visit, with a brief time out to beat the drums onbehalf of professional soccer.

"Once a promoter, always a promoter . . ."

I suppose you can say that about him. Somehow, George Fleharty had more to offer than a fast sell. He displays a genuine honesty along with a friendly warmth and understanding that other promoters lack. It can be assumed that he's wealthy enough to be an independent cuss, but in a short session with a reporter he showed no surliness of egotistic

As president of the Shasta Corporation, Fleharty is the guiding genius that makes Ice Follies a profitable figureskating venture.

Professional soccer isn't as profitable-not yet, at any rate—but that's Fleharty's game now. It is a game that interests the likes of Jack Kent Cooke, Gabe Paul, Roy Hoffenheinz and others.

Despite the respect they all command, none found soccer profitable in the first year of big-time operation in North America. They started with two leagues, squabbled some, and now have become one-the North American Soccer League.

Their high-class introductions last season included television coverage, but that still won't guarantee a profit this season ... or the next ...

"Soccer," says Fleharty, "won't be profitable for at least three more years. Some teams will make it pay a little sooner, Why have America's big sports bankrolls suddenly peeled off to soccer?

The answer lies in the fact that soccer is the one sport that may lead to a world-wide league.

The men moving into soccer in North America already control pro baseball, hockey, football and basketball teams. Baseball is an American game, with only Japan and a few Latin-American nations displaying an outside popularity. Football has never been played anywhere but in the U.S. and Canada. Less than a dozen nations can list hockey as a favorite sport, and ditto baskethall.

Soccer has universal appeal. As Fleharty pointed out, "there are 130 nations registered with the FIFA (the International Football (soccer) Association) . . . and that's eight more than in the United Nations.

"Soccer is the only sport that will have a world league," he "Within the next 10 years, we'll have jets that can take you from Vancouver to Paris or Rome in about three hours.

"You're going to see a league where Vancouver will plays in Paris on a Saturday afternoon . . . Munich in Toronto while Arsenal may be in San Francisco," Fleharty envisions.

Thanks to satellites such as Telestar, the new soccer enthusiasts see a vast television market.

Considering the size of their plans, it flatters Victoria that Royals shower attention on this little of town. Vancouver plays our O'Keefes in a match at Macdonald Park this Sunday and returns the following weekend to face Oakland.

The visits shouldn't hurt the promotion of pro soccer but Fleharty emphasizes the fact that Royals are "approaching a peak in conditioning" and "need all the work they can get." When the Royals played Bonsuccessor in Victoria last month the players weren't in the best of condition, I thin you'll see a big improvement.

"We're looking forward to the series with Oakland. They were the champions last year and have a great offensive team. "The word I get is that Detroit, Oakland, Baltimore and Vancouver are the teams to beat ... but not neccessarily in that order," added Fleharty.

RCN Destroyers Bump In Exercise

HALIFAX (CP) - Two Canadian destroyers, the Saguenay and the Nipigon, bumped lightly during naval exercises off San Juan, Puerto Rico Wednesday. A Canadian forces spokesman here said there were no injuries and the incident resulted in only minor damage to the Saguenay. The Saguenay was carrying out what was described as a practice approach for jackstay transfers with the Nipigon.

Castro Threatens Seizure Of Hijacked Airliners

HAVANA (Reuters) — Pre-mier Fidel Castro Wednesday night virtually accused Russia or putting economic pressure on Cuba and threatened to seize American planes forced here by hijackers in future.

He also admitted in a televised address that there is content and anxiety" in the country over food rationing.

Castro did not mention the Soviet Union by name but left a clear impression that he feels the Russians are not doing more to help Cuba overcome economic difficulties because of ideological differences between the two countries.

Castro spoke on the steps of Havana University at a mass rally commemorating the 11th anniversary of an abortive at-tack by students on former dietator Fulgencio Batista's pal-

Castro said Cuba had no reason to return American planes such as a National Airlines DC-8 with 50 persons aboard which was hijacked by three Cubans Tuesday on a flight from Tampa to Miami and forced to land at Havana.

"We took payment for fuel and airport dues and let the plane go," he said. But he threatened to impound further American planes in retaliation for Cuban ships and planes held in the United States.

It was the second U.S. airliner be hijacked and flown to Cuba within the last three weeks and the seventh hijacking since August.

This week from Macmillans in Canada, an advance copy of a book that may become a national best-seller when it hits the stores in April. Federalism and the French Canadians, it is titled, and the author is Liberal leadership candidate Pierre Elliott Tru-

Even should Mr. Trudeau fail in his bid for the prime minister's hotseat, his book deserves careful reading.

It may not answer the plaintive English Canadian "What does Quebec want?" but it makes plain or the two-nation concept, both of which nation concept, both of which he regards with emphatic disfavor, but a reformed constitution and the altered English Canadian attitude that such a move implies.

This, he tells us, is essen tial. Otherwise, "Canada will continue to be swept periodically by the storms of ethnic dispute, and will gradually become a spiritually sterile land, from which both peace and greatness have been

Much of the book consists of speeches and essays which have already seen print in French-language publications, The foreword and the first chapter—"Quebec and the Constitutional Problem"—are new, and in them, this ardent federalist gives us not only his views, but some useful infor-mation about himself.

An erroneous notion has got abroad that because Mr. Trudeau doesn't mince words when he takes Quebecers to task, he has turned away from his home province.

Nothing could be

Nothing could be more remote from the fact. If he hadn't been born a French-Canadian, he assures us, would have become one by adoption.

More than once in his pages, this convert to the Liberal ranks reminds us that he is and will continue to be his own man. He refers to his "sign of contradiction."

"I have never been able to accept any discipline except which I have imposed upon myself—and there was a time when I used to impose it often. For, in the art of living, as in that of loving, or of as in that of loving, or governing—it is all the same—I found it unacceptable that others should claim to know better than I what was and for me. Consequently, I found tyranny completely intolerable." Were Pierre Trudeau contesting a general election, such utterances would win him the young vote, but how the grey heads and white of a nominating convention will take to a candidate of such prickly independence remains to be seen.

His passion for justice and balance is obvious all through his book, and he cuts with devastating effect through muddled thinking, whether its source be French or Englishspeaking Canada.

In the matter of language, he is for absolute equality at federal level, but would not hold a clerk situated where he dealt with no language but his own to this strict provision.

provincial level, "In principle, the language of the majority will be the only official one. However, when a province contains a French or English minority larger than, say, 15 per cent . . . legislative and judicial functions must be exercised in such a way that the two languages are given absolute equality."

But he does not relieve Quebec of responsibility. changed attitude is also required of his people:

"First," writes the man who may be our next prime minister, "French Canadians must really want it (the revised union he seeks). That is to say, they must abandon their role of oppressed nation and decide to participate boldly and intelligently in the Canadian experiment. It is wrong to say that Confederation has been a total failure for French Canadians; the truth is that they have never really tried to make a success

I don't think the man behind the book would make an easy, or comfortable prime minister, but if the chance is given, he might be the most trenchant since John A. That one gave us Confederation ... this one might persuade Canadians to make

CONVENTION CENTRE

City Hall Files Latest Proposals

An Edmonton based development company has opened its second strong bid to build a convention centre for Victoria. In a letter to Dennis Young, city manager, John W. McCool, project manager for Oxford Leaseholds Limited, Edmonton and its Victoria associate, Bed-well Holdings Limited, has offered three alternatives to the company's original proposal and nvited city council suggestions.

The letter was dated Feb. 28 and was received at city hall on March 1. It has not been officially released to the press. Last fall Oxford with Bedwell

Winters May Also Be Weekend Visitor

Two federal cabinet ministers—possibly three—will visit Victoria this weekend in their quest for support as Liberal leadership nominees.

Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp will be the first to appear Saturday morning, making his headquarters the Red Lion motel, where he will address a reunion luncheon of the 16th Battery, RCA, and likely leave Victoria in the late afternoon. Meanwhile, Trade Minister Robert Winters will be staying at the Bayshore Inn, Vancouver, and if time permits and arrange-ments can be made, he may also visit Victoria. On Sunday, Justice Minister Pierre Trudeau will fly in to the Inner Harbor for a series of events centred at the Empress Hotel.

His charter aircraft is due to land at 10:45 a.m. and a press Merchants conference is set for 11:15. At noon Mr. Trudeau will be guest at a private luncheon for Protest the Liberal convention delegates and local officers, and at 1:15 p.m. he will attend an informal Parking Ban coffee reception in the Empress Ballroom, for which an invita-

Penny Goes Shopping For Ireland's Sons

By Penny Saver

Sure, and Sunday will be St. Patrick's Day. I must admit I am rusty on my brogue this year, but for a full-blooded English lass, I don't do too badly. My husband has a tinge of green in his blood and wears it like a flag each year at this time. Since the wife traditionally takes the nationality of her husband, I forget the Irish Sea and wear the green with the best of them. I like to invest in a small gift for him at this time since he is so proud of his heritage but I have given him all the green ties, shamrock tie tacks, even pieces of live shamrock that either of us can stand. This year I deckded that the thought of green was enough and bought him a-I nearly let the secret escape! But I will describe the line of products I chose from for other women with a Paddy. or Mick to buy for and let him guess which will be his.

The next greenest thing to a shamrock is a fresh lime. A wellknown manufacturer of men's toiletry items has put out a line of lime scented products. They are most refreshing.

Paddy Will Love This Shower Soap

The first step in the total lime effects is the soap. A regular bar of soap in this scent is $1.50 and it is as green as its name. A regular bar of soap in this scent is $1.50 and it is as green as its name. A luxurious shower soap on a rope is the shape of a giant lime Tastefully packaged, it makes a perfect gift at $2.50.

For personal daintiness in a scent a man can't be ashamed of are the lime deodorants. The aerosol cans are $1.50 for the cologne and $1.25 for the regular lime scent. For the man who prefers the stick deodorants there is one for $1.50.

To finish off there is a lime talc at $1.50 for a 314-ounce can This talc can has a slide top to keep the contents safe and dry.

A five-ounce bottle of lime-scented after-shave lotion is $1.50 while a manly cologne in a lime scent is $1.75 for a 21/2bottle, and $2.75 for five ounces.

For perfectly groomed hair there is a hair grooming jelly. Green as a lime can be, it comes in a light-weight, unbreakable Four ounces is $1.50.

Well, which of these lime green gifts did I choose for my Irish husband? They are all perfect, and I will admit that I was hard put to decide.

If you are celebrating this weekend with a party, I know of a shop with the most Irish of all Irish party items. They have paper napkins, nut cups, paper cups and table cloths all decorated with shamrocks and leprechauns. # Take your choice. 101, 102, 103... Or a hot soothing drink like Ovaltine.

You stare at the ceiling and you try to get to sleep by counting. And does it work? Sure it does after awhile, but what wouldn't when you're dead to the world.

The secret of a good night's sleep is going to bed relaxed. And what could be better than a hot soothing mug of Ovaltine to help you relax.

Ovaltine is the good night drink for a lot of people who find it hard to sleep at night.

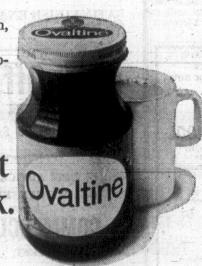

Try a mug yourself. It has a unique taste that no other drink in the world has. That's what makes it so good. Even its rich flavour comes from a blending of barley malt, cocoa and milk. What could be better at bedtime? Nothing.

Ovaltine contains vitamins A, C, Thiamin, Niacin, Iron, Phosphorus and Calcium.

Natural Ovaltine is unsweetened. Swiss Chocolate Ovaltine is pre-sweetened.

So coddle a mug the next time you're restless. Like to-night or every night. Then sleep on it. Sooner than later it'll get your number.

The good night drink.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Buller stand beside -the portrait of General Sir Redvers B. Buller, VC, cousin to Mr. Buller's great-grandfather. The Bullers intend to have family unveiling of the portrait on Saturday, March 23. Coming from Vancouver for the occasion will be Mrs. Fred Buller, Dr. and Mrs. Philip C. Cook, Miss Bromwen Cook, and Mr. and Mrs. W. Stanley Barwick. (Irving Strickland photo.)

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Buller feel that they have a special stake in Ladysmith, especially Buller Street.

Recently arrived here from Texas to make their home, the Bullers admit to having a bad case of ancestor-worship when they visited Buller Street recently.

The street is named for the cousin of Mr. Buller's great-grandfather, General Sir RedBy PAT DUFOUR

The committee report said the change should more clearly refer to a direct serious threat to the mother's health.

This should mean physical or Austria's crime rate has embrace any wider definition by 21.6 per cent such as that made by the World Health Organization, which re-tion law, making clear that abortion for socio-economic reasons is not being legalized.

The Commons health and welfare committee, in a report tabled in the House Wednesday, says there has been public confusion over the intent of the government legislation recently introduced.

The proposed Criminal Code change would make abortion legal where a hospital commission decides continuation of a pregnancy of a female person "would or would be likely to endanger her life or health."

To the committee reasons, a family served a doctions at home, limited income or existing size may be taken into account.

The committee wants to examine this material.

The abortion amendment is part of a major revision of the Criminal Code incorporated in an omnibus bill given first reading by the Commons just before Christmas.

It is understood that many Liberal MPs oppose the change in abortion laws and want the bill split up so that the subject can be handled separately.

The report also asks permission to continue its study of abortion, begun last June. Dr. Harley said statistics have been danger her life or health."

rock fragment two long has provided science with the first evidence that the Antarctic was inhabited by land vertebrates, a paleontologist at the American Museum of Natural History reported today.

It's Biggest Titanothere Of 'Em All

VANCOUVER (CP) — A University of British Columbia scientist has discovered remains of an elephant-sized mammal that roamed North America more than 30,000,000 years ago in the Cariboo district.

Dr. Glenn Rouse, associate professor of botany and geology, came across three well-preserved teeth of the extinct mammal while collecting geological samples along the Fraser River last August

The teeth have been identi-fied as those of a titanothere by Dr. Loris S. Russell, chief

THREE TEETH

The largest of the three teeth is 21/2 inches long and 11/2 inches wide and between three and four inches deep, which makes it considerably larger than other titanothere ins found elsewhere in Canada, say reports prepared by Dr. Russell.

The titanothere had the bulk of a rhinoceros and the weight of a small elephant. It is a member of a group of mam mals that evolved rapidly from small sheep-sized animals in about 20,000,000

Dr. Rouse said his discovery is of major significance be-cause the teeth are the first evidence that the titanother roamed as far west as B.C Remains have been found previously in Canada, but only Saskatchewan's Cypres Hills and in southeastern Alberta.

DATE SOLID

The find also provides scientists with an accurate record of one of the last remaining members of the titanothere group and solidly dates the coal-bearing rock formations associated with the remains, said Dr. Rouse.

The UBC scientist found the three teeth embedded in coal, which protected them from disintegration.

Dr. Edwin H. Colbert said the fragment is the fossilized rear section of the jawbone of an amphibian some four feet long, not unlike a giant salamander. The vertebrate known as a labyrinthodont lived near the South Pole about 200 million years agoabout 250 million years after the first primitice vertebrates emerged in the earth's seas. The fossil was found by a geology team of the Institute of Polar Studies, Ohio University, which worked in mountainous country about 325 miles from the South Pole early last year. It was imbedded in the solidified sediment of a stream bed along with ferns and other plants of the Triassic period.

way. This direction-finding by the heavens is called celestial navigation. A pilot must learn the tricks to make it work. But the trouble is worth it. Celestial navigation tells him more than where he is and where to go. It can also tell him the exact time of the day or night.

Colbert said he expected the fossil, which he identified, to make supporters of the theory that all the continents were once joined and have since drifted apart "very happy." He said the fragment will probably be put on display at the museum in the near future.

Checks the Sun

A modern pilot has other gadgets to guide him when the sum and stars are hidden by clouds. Large airports beam out powerful radio signals. Some light ships also lighthouses and light ships also send out radio beams. These signals travel in perfectly straight lines, and day or night, and let Colbert said he expected the Checks the Sun

ASK

Andy sends a complete, 20 olume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Robert Marlan, age 9, of Rochester, New York, Z for his question:

How does a pilot navigate at night?

D A plane pilot is too far up to ead road signs, day or night Out on the ocean, one wave looks just like the others, and 0 none of them are marked with signs. But the pilots of planes and ships have other ways to navigate. Some of these tricks are very old and others were invented in the space age.

Directions on the ground are plotted from the earth's North Pole. Facing north, of course, the east is on your right side, AR and west on your left, and the south direction is behind you. Road maps are charted on these basic directions, and you might think that pilots would get lost M think that pilots would get lost without them. Not at all. Our ground directions were not discovered and plotted on the ground We do not have to march ground. We do not have to march to the North Pole to check the north direction—all we need do is look up and find the North G Star in the sky. This star, of course, is always there to point out the north direction to pilots and lonely travellers far from This gives you a clue. At night pilot can guide his ship or sunny skies.

A pilot keeps very accurate S records of how fast he has been travelling and in what direction, and he can use this information and he can use this information to determine his exact location at any moment. This system is at any moment. This system is called "dead reckoning," and it can save ships, planes and lives. Actually, the "dead" should be spelled "ded," because it is short for the word "deducted." A pilot uses a lot of clues, tricky figuring and reckoning and comes to his answer by a process of deduction. This clever dead reckoning can be used to navigate at night, even when landmarks and sky pointers are out of sight.

A pilot can use dead reckoning to find just where he is on the sea or in the sky above the earth. His maps and charts show the right direction to take and the distance to his destination. A compass or the North Star can point out the direction. A mileage gauge checks off the distance as he travels his course. The earth's lines of longitude are plotted from points in the sky. And longitude tells the time of day. When a pilot M knows where he is, he may check the sun or the stars above him. He then can use a special almanac to tell him the time of day or night.

What in the World Is a Quahog?

No, the quahog is not related to the pig family. It is a salt rater mollusk, better known as a clam. A wide variety of clams enjoy life in offshore waters around the world. Some types prefer our Pacific shores, others prefer our Atlantic coasts. search in the Mississippi mud could turn up 500 different species of fresh water clam. The quahog is one of many hardshelled clams that thrive in the Atlantic from Texas to Canada's Gulf of St. Lawrence Easteners boast of the suprem flavor of its tender meat and claim that the best quahogs are found off New England's Cape A big specimen may be five inches wide and two inches

The Algonquin Indians had a long, unpronounceable name for the quahog. The New England settlers borrowed this word, condensed it to the six letters of quahog and pronounced it d kwor-hog. #### BRIDGE LESSON By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Newspaper Enterprise Assn. Thirty-five years ago when there weren't many expert bridge players, everyone knew everyone else quite well.

slow players today and &KQJ943 when most of them go WEST . EAST into a trance their part-♣872 ♥Q1083 ners shudder. Someho or other they don't always find that right play when they get through SOUTH (D) ♠ Q54 ♥ J976 East was one of those slow players. It didn't take him long to play his king of hearts after a low card was played

AK93 ♦ 10 4 3 ♣ 10 6 5 2 ♦ A Q 8 6 5 ♣ A Neither Vulnerable West North East South from dummy at trick Pass 3 N.T. West couldn't see that

Opening lead—♥3 singleton ace of clubs in South hand, but West could see that East was thinking of eading a spade and West wanted no part of a spade lead. East could not see that singleton ace of clubs either but he might have. East was looking at 10 of clubs. His parner's three of hearts had been fourth best, so South was marked with four hearts. South had bid and rebid diamonds to show a five-card suit. This left him with only four black cards and three were likely to be the queen and two other spades. Anyway, East thought and finally played his king of spades. South dropped the queen and had established a KYLINE ROOFING AND SIDING Sure spade entry to dummy. If East had returned a heart free estimates 24-hour service at trick two and used his top spades properly, declarer sure spade entry to dummy. If East had returned a heart would have been set several tricks. Even after the king of spades play, East could have defeated the contract by shifting to the ten of diamonds. But East did not make that play. Instead he led the heart back one play too late, titee. Well experienced wattress. Take Must be willing to work day or repairs etc. $52-1361. O. Henson.

ALTERATIONS AND DRESSMAK. ALTERATIONS AND DRESSMAK. Cleaners. $33-7345.

South led a club to his acce, played a spade and wound up with six clubs and one prick in each other suit.

There Are 65 Reasons Why Island Lookout Should Be Retained

GANGES — Gulf Islanders are wondering if the lookout post on Salt Spring Island will be closed.

The speculation started when the B.C. government closed its Salt Spring Ranger station, announcing it would administer the Gulf Islands from Langford and Duncan.

Ed Reynolds, Mount Bruce forestry lookout for the past five years, says closure of the lookout is unlikely because of its strategic location.

Last year Mr. Reynolds spotted 19 fires in the Gulf Islands and Vancouver Island areas. He has spotted 65 since taking over the post in 1963. "This is also an ideal sighting area for tourists" he

With an elevation of 2,400 feet, Mount Bruce offers a panoramic view of mountains, island and sea. On a clear day you can see Howe Sound, Vancouver, Nanaimo and elsewhere within a radius of 80 miles.

At night the lights of coastal vessels can be seen curving their way down the Washington coast. The air is pure and tourists enjoy watching the grouse picking around the railings of the lookout post and deer grazing beyond it.

The lookout job sounds idyllic but it often means working 24 hours without 'Longer, sometimes," Mr.

Reynolds said. "When it's really dry and the forests are closed, I have to snatch a few hours sleep whenever I can." He admits to being "over 60." Ironically, he obtained

The Mount Bruce post is often used as a station, and Mr. repeater Reynolds then becomes part of largescale fire operations.

"I've passed on messages about the bird dog-the Cessna 180 float plane that hunts out the hottest areas of a fire for the water bombers to hit and I've relayed messages to other lookouts."

ED REYNOLDS

On the Gulf Island some fires have been started by carrlessness. Mr. Reynolds tells of a child who set off firecrackers near a wooded area, and boaters who held a picnic on an unoccupied area and then left a glowing campfire behind.

During storms he takes a bearing of where lightning strikes, charts it, then keeps watch on the areas for several days. Fires often smoulder on high mountain slopes.

About 200 people visit th Mount Bruce lookout post annually.

Many simply admire the view. Others want a detailed explanation of the hydrograph, charts and other equipment Mr. Reynolds uses.

One dry hot summer day, a couple armed with movie cameras to shoot the view. found the lookout stripped to his bright pink shorts. They were hoping he'd pose outside his lookout post but there just wasn't time

Mr. Reynolds was busy with his charts and the radio-telephone. He'd just spotted another thin curl of anadian Press Business Editor gold rush? In over-simplified terms, it means that a lot of people have lost confidence in the value of paper money. Instead of having dollars or pounds in their wallets, they want gold in their basements or bank vaults.

CONFIDENCE LOST IN U.S. DOLLAR VALUE

By KEN SMITH

These people, the specula tors who are buying all the gold they can afford, are betting that gold soon will be more than paper money-in other words, that the paper money will be

Since the end of the Second World War, almost all inter-national trade has been paid for— again in over - simpli-fied terms —in terms of United States dollars. Value of other currencies has been set in terms of the dollar. Back of the U.S. dollar was country was especially an-What's behind the great xious to amass gold-U.S. dollars were accepted as just as good.

Why, then, the sudden loss of confidence in the value of the U.S. dollar and the demand for gold, the basic measure of exchange since history began?

There are several reasons, including the loss in value of the British pound and its psychological effects which made people wonder if other currencies were sound.

Basically, however, it re-lates to the fact that for several years now the U.S. has been spending more money in other countries than it has been receiving from them-an adverse balance of payments. Lately this problem has grown to vast proportions because of the huge drains in the U.S. financing the Vietnam war.

No country can keep on spending more than it gets indefinitely, since sooner or later its money will not be as it used to be. Speculators now are betting the U.S. is in, or getting close to, this position. SWITCH MONEY

As a result, they are switching their paper money to gold. If the U.S. does have to devalue its currency, all other currencies now measured in terms of the U.S. dollar, including Canada's, would be Another problem is that the U.S. does not have unlimited gold holdings to give other countries in exchange for its dollars. It now has less than $12,000,000,000 worth of gold, but $10,400,000,000 of this still is tied to backing its domestic dellars. President Johnson is seeking to have this backing lifted by the U.S. congress and free those holdings to meet international demand. This would not affect the domestic value of the U.S.

This, he tells us, is essential. Otherwise, "Canada will continue to be swept periodically by the storms of ethnic dispute, and will gradually become a spiritually sterile land, from which both peace and greatness have been

Much of the book consists of speeches and essays which have already seen print in French-language publications. The foreword and the first chapter-"Quebec and Constitutional Problem"-are new, and in-them, this ardent federalist gives us not only his views, but some useful information about himself.

An erroneous notion has got abroad that because Mr. Trudeau doesn't mince words when he takes Quebecers to task, he has turned away from his home province.

Nothing could be more remote from the fact. If he hadn't been born a French-Canadian, he assures us, he would have become one by

Art Gallery Loans 'Masters' For Festival

Leading Victoria painters have loaned their works for an art display to be held in the Fellowship Hall of First United Church, March 27-30.

Among them are Maxwell Bates, Richard Ciccimarra, Herbert Siebner, John Ritchel, Donald Harvey, John Bodreiner, Pat Martin Bates and Dick Grooms.

Greater Victoria Art Gallery has loaned two old master paintings and two pieces of sculpture.

The display is part of a Festival of Religion and the Arts organized by Rev. Marvin Fowler, associate minister at First United. Besides painting and sculpture, it will include drama, music, worship in the modern idiom and a symposium on the contemporary art scene. The drama section opens in the church theatre tonight at 8 with presentation of Edward play The American Dream by the New World Players. The performance will repeated Friday and Satur-

Winters May Also Be Weekend Visitor

Two federal cabinet ministers—possibly three—will visit Victoria this weekend in their quest for support as Liberal leadership nominees.
Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp will be the first to appear

Saturday morning, making his headquarters the Red Lion motel, where he will address a reunion luncheon of the 16th Battery, RCA, and likely leave Victoria in the late afternoon. Meanwhile, Trade Minister Robert Winters will be staying at the Bayshore Inn, Vancouver, and if time permits and arrangements can be made, he may also visit Victoria. On Sunday, Justice Minister Pierre Trudeau will fly in to the Inner Harbor for a series of events centred at the Empress Hotel.

His charter aircraft is due to land at 10:45 a.m. and a press Merchants conference is set for 11:15. At noon Mr. Trudeau will be guest at a private luncheon for the Liberal convention delegates Protest and local officers, and at 1:15 p.m. he will attend an informal coffee reception in the Empress Parking Ban Ballroom, for which an invitaadvances in flax and rve futures were sharply reduced today in erratic trade on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange.

GRAIN

The growing world for paper currency contributed to early advances in flax prices of more than three cents but quotations were reduced near the close.

Considerable profit-taking came in on the flax advances and similar advances also were reduced in rapeseed, which had shown a firmer appearance. Rye also saw early advances but in trade. Lakehead prices for Two, IWA and domestic wheat were all up 1/4 cent.

NEW YORK (AP) — A record 108 companies in the United States had sales of more than $1,000,000,000 in 1967, an invest-

Investors Reader, published by Merrill Lynch, Pierce,

Fenner and Smith Inc., says the total is 11 more than last year. General Motors with about $20,000,000,000 in sales is the largest. Runners-up include Standard Oil of New Jersey with $14,000,000,000, American Telephone and Telegraph with $13,000,000,000 and Ford Motor

New members of the billion dollar club, the magazine says, are: Ling-Temco-Vought, Signal Oil, Getty Oil, Gulf and Western, Raytheon, United Air

Lines, Consolidated Foods, American Home Products,

Honeywell, Coca-Cola, TRW, Beatrice Foods, Colgate-Palm-

olive. Foremost-McKesson.

Natural Gas Find By Home In Britain

LONDON (CP)-Home Oil of Canada is encouraged but cautious about a second natural-gas find in Yorkshire.
"Naturally, we are encouraged," said George Fong of Calgary, exploration manager for Home Oil in Britain. "But we cannot tell what we've got at this stage.

Reports in British newspapers earlier offered various estimates of the size of reserves indicated by the Yorkshire discovery.
